Highlights

This Mock hearing will mirror an actual Violation of Probation Hearing from beginning to end. The hearing will be a violation brought by a probation officer under Payne v. Robinson, 10 Conn. App 395 (1987). Not only will it include actual testimony but exhibits will be introduced and marked. Under a probation violation hearing you will observe the two distinct components, that being the evidentiary hearing to determine whether the defendant violated his probation. If it is determined he violated his probation, then to proceed to the second component, that being whether to continue the defendant on probation or revoke his probation.
